

Neglecting students

The Free Press (Oct. 1/2011) published an article titled: "Report: 1 in 3 grads had to do remedial work." Despite the fact that the Bloomfield Hills School District is well-funded and spends over $22,000 per student per year, the report indicates that 21 percent of district graduates need to take remedial college classes.

In my opinion, the most significant reason to recall the board of education is that they are neglecting the intellectual development and academic achievement of our K-12 mainstream students.

I do not think that an expensive high school with a huge performing arts center will "solve" this problem.

It is time for local taxpayers to get control of this well-funded school district. Our board is wasting tax dollars that are intended to educate our students.

Please support the recall of all 7 school board trustees.
